WHAT IS IT ALL ABOUT?

In July, 1974, a program outline was presented to the Area Supervisor, Ottawa Office of the Probation and Parole Service, and the Field Practice Unit of the Centre of Criminology. The program was based upon the following proposition:

That the gainful employment of the probationers and parolees under supervision is expected to reduce the rate of reconviction during the supervision period.

All Probation and Parole Officers in the Ottawa area expressed their desire to participate. There was consensus among the staff that the provision of employment for our clients is an important aspect of our service delivery role.

The structure for the operation of the pilot project was in terms of the following:

- co-ordination undertaken by one full time Probation and Parole Officer.
- job finding and placement by a Department of Criminology student on concurrent placement.
- Probation staff making referrals of their clients who need a job in order to assist them to comply with the terms of their probation.

WHAT HAS BEEN HAPPENING?

The following figures are recorded for the period July, 1974 to December, 1976 —

- 278 prospective employers have been contacted
- 194 prospective employers have promised to assist our clients
- 771 probationers and parolees have been referred to the project by their Probation and Parole Officer
- 447 probationers and parolees have been referred to employers
- 355 probationers and parolees (male and female) have obtained employment

Out of a total of 251 probationers and parolees placed in jobs, 18 have been reconvicted while under supervision. The rate of reconviction while under supervision between July, 1974 and December, 1975 is 7.17 per cent.
